HISTORY

The Alberta Environmental Research Trust was created in the spring of 1971 by enactment of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to provide a mechanism for "the expansion of applied and fundamental research and development relative to environmental improvement."

Security against the inconsistencies of nature appears to have remained a constant goal throughout the history of human development.

In accomplishing this, humans have fought for thousands of years to free themselves from environmental restraints in their daily lives.

Certainly there is acceptance of the need for research to provide an "Environmental Census" not only in biophysical terms, but in terms of human values and perceptions.

Many people are asking whether some of the penalties we are paying as a result of environmental degradation caused by the human fight are too high.

A yearly grant is provided by the Government of the province of Alberta and contributions are accepted from other sources.

To serve this end, the Trust is enjoined to "seek and receive" the necessary funds allowing the organization to support environmental research.

Where feasible, the Trust will apportion grants of its funds for research in each year equally between persons or institutions that are supported entirely or mainly by public monies and those that are not.

Provision has been made for the operation of the Trust in a manner consistent with corporate operation and according to legislation specifically concerning Trust Funds in Alberta.

Since the inception of the trust the Trustee's have granted $4,756,442.00 of which $554,449.00 has been received from the private sector.

CREATED BY LEGISLATIVE ENACTMENT APRIL 15, 1971

1989 was an important transition year for the Alberta Environmental Research Trust (AERT). During the 19 years since its inception, the major environmental issues have become more clearly focussed, and other developments prompted the Board of Trustees to re-orient AERT's strategic plans and priorities.

The current major public concerns involve several of Alberta's industries. International attention has become focussed on the "greenhouse" phenomenon which is blamed, in large part, on carbon dioxide emissions; Alberta has a major stake in this issue due to its economic dependence on petroleum products and coal which generate carbon dioxide. Within Alberta there is a continuing controversy regarding the nature and impacts of pulp mill effluents into river waters. Alberta has already developed a global-scale petrochemical industry for which special technology is required to ensure the safe handling of numerous toxic materials. It was apparent to the AERT Board of Trustees that these industrial environmental issues demand priority consideration for R&D.

The following is a brief summary of the other factors which prompted a review of AERT's strategies:

- The annual grant from Alberta Environment, upon which AERT has been dependent, has been reduced due to budget restrictions.
- Although AERT has convinced the authorities that it should have access to some Lottery funds, this is conditional on advance commitments of equal cash contributions from private sources.
- The past practice of soliciting proposals attracted many applications of questionable value to environmental protection, and those which warranted consideration should be directed to one of the other thirteen Alberta Government research funding agencies.

The Board of Trustees analysed all of these factors and concluded that AERT's most effective role is to solicit and negotiate specific major research projects, to be co-funded with private industry, to develop new scientific technology to resolve the foregoing environmental problems. Much of the controversy and concerns generated by these problems arise from a lack of reliable technical information, hence the need for objective research. Private sector industries can benefit from joint research ventures, not only through co-funding, but also through possible tax benefits, since AERT is registered as a charitable organization. In addition AERT's Grants Advisory Committee can provide technical consultations, and can acquire access to the expertise and facilities of the Alberta Environmental Centre in Vegreville. The procedures are simple and expedient, and have no connection whatsoever to regulations.

During the past year the Board of Trustees initiated plans to publicize the programs available through AERT. The inaugural edition of a quarterly Newsletter has been published, and is available for free distribution to interested organizations and individuals. A professional video has been produced to explain how AERT has helped several successful grantees; the video is available for presentation or loan.

The AERT facilities are being expanded to include computer systems which will enable accessing data banks for information on environmental research. This would permit research applicants to search for pertinent publications and identify technology gaps.

Anyone desiring further information should contact our Manager, John Russell.

The success of AERT is due to the continued support of its creator, Alberta Environment, and to volunteer Trustees who are appointed by Order-in-Council, and to the technical experts appointed by the Board to serve on the Grants Advisory Committee, and especially to the dedication of John Russell who has managed AERT since its inception.

ALBERTA LEGISLATURE

OFFICE OF THE AUDITOR GENERAL

AUDITOR'S REPORT

To the Board of Trustees of the Alberta Environmental Research Trust

I have examined the balance sheet of the Alberta Environmental Research Trust as at March 31, 1990 and the statement of revenue, expenditure and unexpended funds for the year then ended. My examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and accordingly included such tests and other procedures as I considered necessary in the circumstances.

In my opinion, these financial statements present fairly the financial position of the Trust as at March 31, 1990 and the results of its operations and the changes in its financial position for the year then ended in accordance with the disclosed basis of accounting, as described in Note 2 to the financial statements, applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding period.
